ABSTRACT

Based on a survey conducted by the American Association of Junior Colleges (AAJC), this directory provides information on 1,038 community, junior, and technical colleges and two-year branch campuses in the United States and its territories, including data on 1968-69 enrollments, personnel, and student costs. Following material on the scope and compilation of the directory, a data analysis and projections of two-year college growth are presented. Next, the directory lists the colleges alphabetically by state, including the following information for each: location; chief administrative head; year organized as a junior college; type of control or affiliation; AAJC membership; state recognition or accrediting agency; programs (i.e., transfer and/or occupational); co-educational or single-sex status; October 1968 enrollment of full- and part-time freshman, sophomore, and unclassified students; October 1968, summer 1969, and October 1969 total enrollments; full- and part-time faculty and administrators in 1968-69; and cost per academic year for in-district, out-of-district, and out-of-state students. Statewide enrollment summaries are then provided for all institutions and public and independent schools, followed by tables showing distribution by size of enrollment, independent and church-related schools by type of control, and accredited schools by state. Changes in institutions since the previous year, information on AAJC, junior college organizations, and state administrators of two-year college education are covered in the final sections.

INTRODUCTION

How many new institutions will be opened this year? What is the staffing picture this fall for community and junior colleges? What is the rate of increase in enrollments this year — five years from now? This is a sample of the questions that the staff at the American Association of Junior Colleges is frequently called upon to project throughout the year.

Fortunately, we have been able to make rather sound predictions, as borne out each year by the statistics gathered for the directory which AAJC publishes. The fact is the accelerated rate of growth that began about ten years ago has stayed on a relatively predictable keel, with enrollments increasing each year by 15 to 20 per cent. During this past decade, thirty-five to sixty new institutions opened each year with faculty and staff increasing accordingly.

The current story is no exception, as this 1970 Junior College Directory will show. Forty new institutions opened this past fall, and enrollments passed the two million mark, representing about a 15 per cent increase over opening fall enrollments in 1968. Figures in this Directory are analyzed in the following pages.

As in previous years, information for the publication was collected by the Association with the cooperation of state offices of junior and community college education, as well as the institutions themselves. By compiling this data, the American Association of Junior Colleges provides a ready reference for basic information about two-year institutions of higher education. While AAJC membership includes a majority of the country's junior and community colleges, the Directory also includes nonmember institutions.

Not all institutions listed in this compendium are labeled community or junior colleges. Some may have the title technical institute or university branch. The editors have made an effort to include all institutions that are organized on a two-year basis, have state recognition and/or regional accreditation, and offer two-year associate degree programs. We have tried to be as comprehensive as possible in the listing in order to be of greater assistance to those interested.

In addition to enrollment data, the Directory contains information on tuitions and fees, programs, accreditation, control, types of institutions, Association membership, and on numbers of personnel employed in the colleges. Summary tables on enrollment by state and types of institutions are also included.

A questionnaire survey was used to collect data. The Association, therefore, has relied heavily on the reporting institutions for accuracy of all information contained in this publication. More detailed information on individual two-year colleges may be found in the seventh edition of American Junior Colleges (1967), published by the American Council on Education, One Dupont Circle, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. In addition, the council publishes each fall Accredited Institutions of Higher Education for the Federation of Regional Accrediting Commissions of Higher Education. This report updates, in effect, the major work on a yearly basis by including exhibits on newly accredited two-year as well as four-year colleges.

The Association, in general, follows the criteria established for American Junior Colleges in determining the institutions to be included in the annual Directory. That is, institutions included are those accredited or recognized by the country's six regional accrediting agencies and state-level agencies authorized to approve junior colleges. The Directory does not include proprietary colleges.

The staff for the 1970 Junior College Directory includes William A. Harper, Jack C. Gernhart, Nancy Floyd, and Pamela Strunk. Tina Britz of the AAJC Publications Office provided editorial services. The Association acknowledges the expert assistance provided by the Research Division of the National Educational Association in processing information collected. And, we are most grateful to the personnel of the reporting institutions for taking the time to assist in this project.

An Analysis

Although the 1970 Directory is prepared principally to give basic information about nonprofit two-year colleges, the gathered data continues to provide insights into the growth and development in the field. An analysis of the current Directory, which has information about the academic year 1968-69 as well as the fall of 1969, spells out expansion both in terms of the number of institutions being opened and the number of persons taking advantage of what the colleges are offering. The figures support various national forecasts regarding two-year college development. The statistics show:

1. Continued increase in the number of new institutions being established
2. Continued acceleration in enrollments of public two-year colleges, although not at the same high rate of the past five years
3. A slight decrease in the number of independent and church-related colleges as well as a continued decrease in their enrollments
4. A growth in the number of multicampus or multicollege institutions
5. Continued growth and development of statewide systems of junior colleges.

In analyzing the data in this Directory, it is apparent that the number of colleges should be considered as a minimum. Several states do not consider two-year branches of colleges and universities as junior colleges although they offer two-year programs. It should be noted, too, that enrollments contained in the Directory are for credit students only. They do not include vast numbers of students enrolled in adult and continuing education programs.

The 1970 Directory reports a total of 1,038 institutions, a net increase of forty-five over the preceding year. Forty new institutions enrolled students for the first time in September 1969. Additionally, the new Directory has five more colleges in multicampus listings with a total of twenty-three institutions that were not in the preceding Directory. Twenty institutions listed in the 1969 Directory are not listed this year. Six of these colleges became four-year institutions, twelve colleges closed or ceased operations, and two did not respond to the questionnaire. (The institutions added to or dropped from this Directory are found at the end of Table VII.) It should be noted that the six colleges which converted to four-year status did so as part of long-range planning based on studies that indicated the college would be more effective as four-year colleges than as two-year institutions. Those that ceased operations were small private colleges.

Data for 1969 continues to reveal the consistent growth in community and junior colleges over the past ten years. A summary follows:

GROWTH IN NUMBER AND ENROLLMENT OF JUNIOR COLLEGES 1959-1969

Year	Number of Colleges	Enrollment	Per Cent of Increase of Enrollment over Preceding Year
1959	663	640,527	-----
1960	678	660,216	3.07
1961	678	748,619	13.39
1962	704	818,869	9.38
1963	694	927,534	13.27
1964	719	1,043,963	12.55
1965	771	1,292,753	23.83
1966	837	1,464,099	13.25
1967	912	1,671,440	14.16
1968	993	1,954,116	16.91
1969	1,038	2,186,272	11.88

Forty new colleges were opened in the fall of 1969, all of them public. These colleges had a total initial enrollment of 48,048 students, with ranges from 142 to 8,500. Fifteen of these institutions enrolled 1,000 or more students. Four new colleges were opened in California, three each in Arizona, Kansas, and Missouri.

Enrollments in the public community-junior colleges for 1969 were up by 240,529 over 1968, or an increase of 13.28 per cent. Public community-junior colleges were operating in all the states except South Dakota. Forty-one states reported increases in enrollments, while eight states reported decreases. With the exception of Iowa, all decreases were very small. The 34.2 per cent decrease in Iowa enrollments is the result of a change in reporting procedures and classification of students. States reporting some of the greatest percentage increases are New Jersey (59.3 per cent), Wyoming (44.5 per cent), Oregon (36.6 per cent), Kansas (31.9 per cent), Maryland (28.7 per cent), and Tennessee (27.5 per cent). The largest numerical increases were in California (54,725), Illinois (20,004), Florida (17,487), Michigan (15,612), Washington (14,143), New York (13,666), New Jersey (13,126), Pennsylvania (10,980) and Texas (10,183). These figures suggest that states reporting the greatest growth in terms of percentages are those with newly established or expanding state systems. However, the more mature state systems continue to reflect numerical growth.

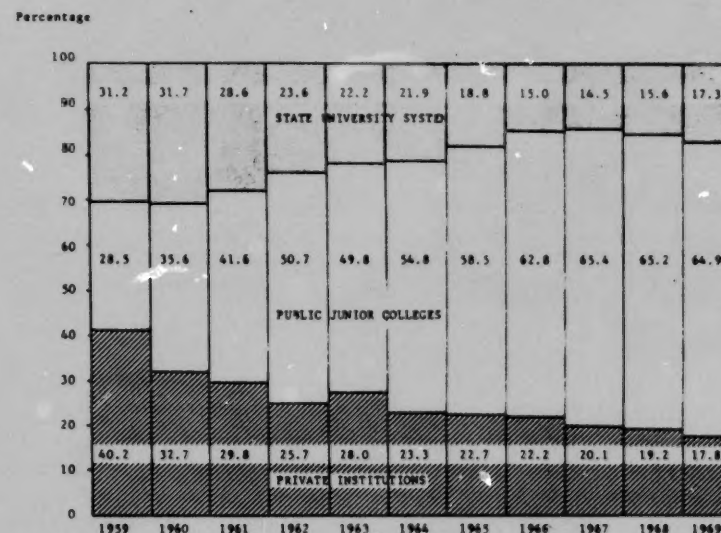

A total of 794 public institutions are reported in the Directory, a gain of fifty-four over the preceding year. Gains totaling 296,300 students were reflected in the reports of 595 institutions, while 169 showed net losses of 55,771. Thirty-two colleges reported no changes in enrollments. Included in the loss figures is one public two-year college that became a four-year institution.

GROWTH IN NUMBER AND ENROLLMENT OF PUBLIC TWO-YEAR COLLEGES 1959-1969

Year	Number of Colleges	Enrollment	Per Cent of Increase of Enrollment over Preceding Year
1959	390	551,760	-----
1960	405	566,224	2.62
1961	405	644,968	13.90
1962	426	713,334	10.59
1963	422	814,244	14.14
1964	452	912,093	13.12
1965	503	1,152,086	25.07
1966	565	1,316,980	14.31
1967	648	1,528,220	16.03
1968	739	1,810,964	18.50
1969	794	2,051,493	13.28

As public community college systems continue to grow, an increasing percentage of students are beginning their college work in the two-year college. California reports that 88 per cent of the freshmen entering public colleges are enrolled in its community colleges. In Michigan, about one-half of the first-time college students are enrolled in a two-year college. In Florida, 65 per cent of all first-time-in-college students are enrolled in the public junior colleges. Other figures submitted by Florida shown on the graph below are indicative of the national trends.

Private, independent and church-related junior colleges continue to show a decline both in number of institutions and in total enrollments. The number of colleges declined from 254 to 244. Of the 254 colleges listed in the 1969 Directory, nineteen are not listed in the 1970

Directory. Five of these colleges became four-year institutions, twelve either closed or ceased operations as a two-year college, and two colleges did not respond to the questionnaire. The colleges that closed had a total 1968 fall enrollment of 749 students or an average of about sixty-two per institution. Colleges that did not respond had a 1968 enrollment of ninety-four. Colleges that became four-year institutions had a 1968 fall enrollment of 5,623 or an average of 1,125 per institution. These net decreases are partially offset by the adding of ten independent junior colleges to the 1970 Directory that had a 1969 enrollment totaling 2,983. These institutions were not reported in the 1969 Directory. Of the 244 independent/private institutions listed in the Directory, 121 colleges showed gains of 10,967 students while sixteen colleges reported no change. The remaining 125 colleges, which includes those being dropped from this Directory, showed decreases in enrollments of 19,339 students. Several facts explain this rather large decrease. One private four-year college had previously reported all freshmen and sophomore students as a part of their junior college division. A change in reporting procedure this year, in which only those actually enrolled in the division could be reported, resulted in a decrease of 4,954 students. One private college having a 1968 enrollment of 596 became a public institution. The enrollments of these two colleges, in addition to those reflected by the five colleges that became four-year institutions, account for a decrease of 11,173 students or 57.7 per cent of the total decrease.

A Projection

From the foregoing analysis, it seems apparent that community-junior colleges will continue to grow, both in numbers of institutions and in enrollment. Contributing factors are increasing numbers of high school graduates; growth in percentage of college-age persons who are seeking college opportunities; rapid expansion of curriculum and career education opportunities within the two-year colleges; the increasing popularity of adult, continuing education, and community service programs; and stepped up recruitment of disadvantaged and minority students.
